A MONKEY BELLHOP

JOE gets a job as bellhop in the Hotel du Soleil. His first mishap occurs when he mistakes a Chinese laundryman's queue for a bellrope and upsets the Chinaman and strews the lobby with collars and cuffs. Joe is instrumental in breaking up a "lounge lizard's" game by means of a hat pin, some chewing-gum and cayenne pepper.

He is given a job as cigarette vendor, but arouses the wrath of the hotel guests by selling them loaded cigars. His next employment is in the role of bootblack; but he blacks several pairs of white stockings and shoes and is soon fired from that job.

His next tries his hand as a dish-washer. The amount of crockery he breaks is enormous and he is transferred to the hotel staff of waiters. He lasts at this job about as long as he did at the others—his downfall results from bringing a mouse into a meeting of a woman's club.

The management then intrusts him with the job of kennel-keeper. He allows the guests' dogs to run wild through the hotel, however, and is threatened with dismissal when the guests declare their intention of leaving. Joe insists on having his little joke, nevertheless, and, disguised in a tiger rug, races through the hotel throwing the guests into a panic.
